AT JAMES OLD STAND. A SUCCESSFUL TRAIN ROBBERY IN

NINETY THOUSAND DOLLARS TAKEN.

Seven Masked Men Hold Up a Missouri Pacific Train and Rifle the Express Car

—A Daring and Sensational Crime. KANSAS CITY, Mo., August 17 .- The lim-

Sted Kansas City express, on the Missouri Pacific, was held up by seven highwaymen at Otterville, Mo., early this evening and robbed of $90,000 of express matter. The train was crowded with passengers, and the safe of the express company was stuffed with money consigned, much of it to western banks.

The train left Tipton, Mo., at 3 o'clock a. m. Two mysterious figures were seen by the engineer lurking around the forward end of the train, but no particular attention was paid to them.

Just after leaving Tipton the fireman turned towards the tender to fire up the engine and looked squarely into the muzzle of two revolvers in the hands of two masked men who were lying on their faces on top of the coal. They had evidently boarded the forward platform of the "blind' mail car at that place and were crawling over the tender toward the engine.

One of them covered the fireman with his revolver, while the other took care of the engineer. They were told to hold up their hands.

"Now you run this train to Otterville wa ter tank," ordered the leader, "and stop there. If you attempt to stop at any other place or give a signal of alarm, you'll be dead men." And the robbers placed their weapons close to the heads of their victims.

The engineer and fireman could only obey Otterville water tank stands in "robbers. cut." 'This is where Jesse James committed one of his boldest robberies and is at the bottom of a steep grade. When the train approached it the engineer had great difficulty in attempting to bring the engine to a stand-still. His attempts were redoubled when the leader of the two robbers pressed the muzzle of his revolver against the engineer's temple and the ain was stopped.

"You come with me," the leader addressed Frank Droyer, the engineer. "And you attend to the fireman," he said to his com-

The engineer was commanded to go to the express car and tell the messenger to open the door. When he reached the express car, he found that the robbers had five confederates stationed at convenient places about the car, all heavily armed and their faces concealed behind masks. He walked to the door of the express car, and covered by the revolvers of three of the robbers, called to Express Messenger Sam Avery to open the door. Avery, suspecting no danger, pushed back the door. As he did so, the leader of the robbers and one confederate pushed their revolvers in and ordered the messenger to hold up his hands. The order was promptly obeyed, and three of the robbers jumped in the car.

They proceeded immediately to the safe, which was locked. Avery was ordered to open it, and at the point of the revolver did so. One of the robbers unfolded a gunny sack and into it were placed the entire contents of the safe. The robbers then made an exnination of the car to see if they had over 'looked anything, and finding nothing more of value, jumped out of the car.

In the meantime the conductor, alarmed at the unusual stoppage of the train, went forward to see what was the trouble. He got only as far as the rear end of the express car. when he was halted by one of the robbers, Who told him to go back and collect tickets. 'We'll take care of this end of the train,' the robber added. The conductor hurried back to the first pas senger coach and excitedly informed the passengers of what was going on and advised them to hide their valuables. Money, watches, jewelry and everything valuable was shoved into boot tops, into cracks of the seats and any-where to get it out of sight. The conductor had just warned the passengers in the second car, when the train started on its journey again. The robbers had finished their work and es-

The engineer pulled the train into Otterwille, half a mile distant, where a part of the crew were left to arouse the sheriff and organize a posse to pursue the robbers. At Sedalia, seven miles from the scene of the robbery, the news was telegraphed to headquarters at St. Louis, and the available detective force of the road was dispatched to the scene. The robbers had left their tracks in the mud, but they were soon lost. The sheriff's posse and detectives are scouring the country and hope to capture some of the

SAFE BLOWERS AT KNOXVILLE. They Crack a Safe and Get Money and

KNOXVILLE, Ga., August 17 .- [Special.]-Knoxville has been visited by burglars. On Thursday they entered the store of J. W. Blasingame, blowed open his new safe and escaped with its contents, consisting of $40 in money, belonging to Mr. Blasingame, and also a considerable amount belonging to Dr. W. F. Blasingame, which he had deposited there from time to time, for safe-keeping. The books and other papers were scattered and torn. The goods had caught on fire, but it had either gone out or had been extinguished by

BROKER JAMESON'S TRAGIC DEATH.

Crazed by Ill Health, a Prominent Million aire Hange Himself from the Door of His Room.

NEW YORK. August 17 .- In the palatial resilence of his sister, Mrs. Amos Cotting, 835 Fifth avenue, this afternoon, was found the body of Joseph A. Jameson, a Broad street broker and banker. He had hanged himself from the bed room door in his fine suite of rooms on the fourth floor, rear. Jameson is reputed a millionaire, and was a stock exchange member of the firm or Jameson, Smith & Co., bankers and brokers, at Exchange place and Broad street. The second member of the firm is James D. Smith, commodore of the New York Yacht Club.

Jameson's family is out of town, and from what can be learned from his friends, temporary insanity, caused by illness and, perhaps, aggravated by a feeling of loneliness absence of his family, is thought to be the cause of the tragedy.

Mrs. Jameson and her youngest son, a ninor, seventeen years old, are at Scarboro Beach, Me. Two sons, Addison, the eldest, a widower, thirty-three years old, and Alexander, twenty-eight years old, and a daughter, Mrs. Thomas S. Manson, were spending Sunday at their father's farm at Clinton Corners, eight miles from Poughkoepsie; and the second daughter, Mrs. Myra Murphy, widow of Richard G. Murphy, Jr., son of the ex-collector of the port, was at Elberon, N. J. The last seen of Jameson was at 5 o'clock Saturday, when he came home from his office and told the servant he would go to his room to rest. He did not appear today, and be coming alarmed the servant called a park po liceman, who entered the rooms through the one unlocked door. He found the body of Jameson hanging with a sheet around his neck, the other end of which had been thrown over the door and tied to the door-knob. The suicide had knelt so as to bring strangu lation quickly; his knees almost touched the floor. He had evidently disrobed with intention of retiring for the night, but before the awful impulse seized him, he was only clad in his night shirt and drawers.

The body was taken down and placed on the bed. Superintendent Jenks, of Murray Hill, a near friend of the deceased, took charge of the funeral arrangements. Nothing was found to indicate the cause of the deed.

Jameson was taken sick three months ago and was still weak when, three weeks ago, he was taken with throat trouble. The latter affliction was so serious that Professor E. J. Jenway was kept in close attendance. The trouble increased and the physical pain must have resulted in a sudden fit of insanity

Jameson came to New York from St. Louis in 1865 with his brother-in-law, Amos Cotting, since deceased. Each is said to have brought $1,500,000 as profits of a dry goods business. A brokerage business was opened on Wall street, and at first the firm belonged to the open Board of Brokers, and later to the stock exchange. Jameson was a man of domestic taste and was regarded as a conservative and prudent financier. His business is said to be in good

FIVE MINERS KILLED. A Pitched Battle Between Two Factions

Near Birmingham. BIRMINGHAM, Ala., August 17 .- [Special.]-Reports of a fatal fight among miners at Johnson, twenty-eight miles from the city, were received here tonight.

It seems that some fifteen or twenty miners became involved in a quarrel yesterday while at work down in the mine and divided into two factions. One party of ten came out of the mine first and waited at the mouth of the shaft for the other party.

When the second party came out they were attacked by those above ground. As a man's head would appear at the mouth of the shaft he would be struck with a pick.

Five men are reported killed outright or fatally injured. There is no telegraph office near the mine and homes and further particulars cannot be learned tonight. The coroner has gone down to investigate the matter. So far as known no arrests have been made.

A Brutal Shooting and the Escape of th Murderer-A Posse of Men and a Pack

ATHENS, Ga., August 17 .- [Special.]-Athens and the surrounding country are aroused and determined over the atrocious murder of young Henry Hunter last night at Carter's camp on the Georgia, Carolina and Northen road in Madison county.

The people are scouring the country, and if the negro is caught, the hangman's noose will be his route to eternity.

Henry Hunter was a clever, genial young gentleman, of about nineteen summers and numbered his friends in hosts. He was a nephew of Mr. Sam Hunter, of this place, and was managing a line of drays for his uncle.

Yesterday at Carter's camp he ordered negro, named Morrison, to do some work and received an insolent reply. Last night the negro came to the store, at the camp, entered, and walking up to the counter he re newed his remarks, and reaching his hand over the counter, placed a 38-caliber Smith & Wesson pistol near Hunter's temple and pulled the trigger.

The ball crashed through the young man's brain, and he reeled and fell to the floor. The negro bounded out of the door and made his

This was about 7:30 o'clock, and Hunter lingered in unconsciousness until nearly 1 o'clock, when he died. His relatives were at once notified, and went over to where his body was.

When the news reached Athens, feeling ran high against the murderer, and in a short while over a hundred men left the city armed and prepared to execute vengeance upon the dastardly scoundrel if they laid eyes upon him. They sent to Colonel James M. Smith for his bloodhounds, and put them upon the trail. They failed to track him, and he put still more space between him and his pur

This morning as Captain Plunkett wa noving his train toward Union Point, he recognized a negro standing by the track at Hutchins Crossing as the one who was wanted and stopped his train. Not being armed he tried to get him to board the train and offered him a free ride. The negro was too shrewd and declined the offer, being careful to keep himself out of reach of the trainmen.

The engineer of the train told him he guessed he would come with him, and advanced towards him. The negro whipped out his pistel and began retreating. As he went he kept the pistol cocked and thus blocked pursui-He went out into a swamp and stayed there till evening, when he went over to a negro church to meeting.

This afternoon a posse of about forty left Athens on the Georgia train, and Sheriff Weir, of Clarke county, accompanied them. They scoured the woods for twenty miles around the place where he was seen in the morning, and nce came upon his trail. They are now searching every corner in the country, and if the scoundrel is caught, he will surely swing. He is a short negro about five feet six inches high, coal black, wears a black hat, blue shirt, red undershirt and jeans pants. The murder was an unprovoked one and one which the people of our vicinity will not relegate to the law's delay. He will be pursued until caught if earnest efforts and unceasing vigilance will accomplish the re-

THREE BROTHERS FIGHT

And Blood Flows Freely--They Afterwards
Make Up. August A., Ga., August 19.-[Special.]-Edward and Charles Cliett, who;live in Columbia county, came to town yesterday and spent the day with their brother, Alfred Cliett, a carpenter in this city. They ended up Saturday night in a big celebration and this morning hadn't gotten sober.

Edward tried to shoot Alfred, his city brother, but shot himself in the finger. Afterwards he cut Alfred with a hatchet. Charles ried to interfere and became involved and there was a lively three-cornered row, in which blood flowed at a lively rate and the Augusta brother came out worst. When the festivities were over they made friends and all three left for Columbia county The Mount Moriah camp meeting attracted a large number of Augusta people today.

The electric cars have coined money all day and the number of passengers has been limited only by the capacity of the cars. The line opened up to Turpin lake, three wiles in the country, furnishes a pleasant outing and has been crowded all day. The city pastors are getting home from their summer vacations and several pulpits were oc-cupied today for the first time in weeks past. In the summer the devil has things pretty much his own way in Augusta.

The negroes immediately boarded a freight train and one of them was captured at Browns ville in response to a telegram, the other two making their escape.

Yesterday Mr. Greer went to Brownsville and brought the prisoner here, who gave his name as Thomas Woodard. A preliminary trial was held and the negro confessed his guilt and was bound over to the next term of the circuit court.

About midnight last night a mob visited

Marshal Bond's house, demanded the keys of the jail and commanded him to stay at home. This morning the prisoner's body was found hanging to a persimmon tree just beyond the corporate limits. Over twenty balls had been fired into the negro's body.

WILL BE HANGED IF CAUGHT. SHOOTING FROM THE MOVING TRAINS

Exciting Times at Albany—Complaints from the Police Authorities Against the Pink-ertons—All Quiet in New York.

ALBANY, N. Y., August 17 .- Trouble was that the Pinkerton men were all known to be armed. These expectations were in part fulfilled. Nearly all of the Pinkerton men were with-drawn from duty on crossings within the city limits, as their presence served to excite the frenzy of a throng of onlookers. The police took their place, and it is owing to this change that more than the following affrays are no The stoning of the Pinkerton men was continued today up to noon, with no serious result. About 1 o'clock, while James Hatton, of New York, a Pinkerton man, was patroling the tracks in the vicinity of Van Wert street, he claims to have been struck with a stone in the chest, while his companion, who was on duty at that point, was knocked down and severely hurt by a gang of roughs. Then he fired his revolver into the crowd, the ball striking a small boy, fifteen years old, named Richard Dwyer. Dwyer received an ugly wound on the hip, and is now in the hospital. He will recover.

Hatton had not time to fire another shot The crowd surged around him, and, before the police could interfere, his clothes were torn off his back. He was struck with fists and clubs, and presented a pitiable sight when rescued from the anger of the crowd by the police, who were obliged to draw their revolvers to stem the crowding mass of people. policeman had his coat torn off him in the fight. Hatton was taken to the station house. where, after his wounds were dressed by the police surgeon, he was locked up on a charge of assault in the second degree.

Hatton would surely have suffered death had the police not come to his assistance when they did. These occurrences aroused the passions of the spectators-mostly roughs and hoodlumsas nothing else has since the strike was declared. Their number increased and the chief of police, fearing further trouble, established his headquarters in the station house near by and placed all reserves at that point. At intervals after this, freight trains came down from West Albany past this crossing on their way to New York. About 3 o'clock, one of these, the Pinkertons say, was stoned.

The police claim such was not the case. At any rate, when the train reached Broadway viaduct, the Pinkertons on top of the freigh cars carrying Winchester rifles, began a reck less fusilade on the crowd standing in that vicinity. Four or five shots were fired without any provocation and resulted in the injury of an innocent party, Mrs. Thomas Hogan, who was standing on the stoop of her residence on a near-by corner, when the shot struck her in the right thigh. She will recover.

The train went right on and the miscreant After this incident, Robert Pinkerton, who had charge of his forces in person, called on Chief Willard. He said his men had been assaulted continually, and that fire arms had been put in their possession only yesterday that they might be used when necessary in self-defense and in the work of protecting the company's property, which task had been allotted to him. He declared his readiness to turn over to the police any of his men who had committed any crime, and promised to investigate the shooting of Mrs. Hogan. Still he would stand by his men against wanton attacks of roughs. Chief Willard expressed the belief that if the Pinkerton men had never been brought here, the local police would have abundantly able to cope with the situation. As it is, he fears there will be further trouble if these men stay here, and says that in that event the local authorities could not be held responsible. He had repeatedly informed property would be well guarded by his own men if no outside force were brought here to inflame the passions of sympathizers with the

While the two chiefs were talking a third with the two ciners were taiking a third victim was brought into the station house. He was Frank Parks, aged eighteen, and had been shot in the right arm above the elbow by one of the Pinkerton men on a freight train which passed through at 4 o'clock. The assailant escaped, the train continuing on its way.

The assault was unprovoked. Officer Dunn, who had arrested the Pinkerton man who fired into the crowd at Van Wert street crossing, had his prisoner taken from him, and was himself roughly handled by a crowd of Pinkerton men.

When asked what he thought would result from the interview, Mr. Webb answered: "I think that Powderly will call here tomorrow, submit demands which will be refused, and then I think he will call the strike off and decide to sacrifice the members of his order on this branch rather than involve the whole order in a fight over the entire system, which in der in a fight over the entire system, which in the end would be disastrous."

QUAY'S PROGRAMME.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

HE AND ALDRICH ARE ACTING TO.

AND WILL CARRY THEIR POINT. Granny Hoar and Spooner Greatly Discomfited-The Senate's Programme for WASHINGTON, August 17. - [Special.]-

There seems to be no reason tonight to doubt that the Quay resolution to shelve the force bill will be considered and passed next Tuesday, despite the lamentations of the radicals.

The rabid bayonet bill supporters will neither be comforted nor reconciled to their fate and the wild talk of killing the tariff bill in the house as a means of resenting the abandonment of the force bill and also of reading "Boss Quay ringleaders and the traitors" out of the party continues. There is a rumor affeat tonight that if the Quay resolution passes on Tuesday The New York Tribane will begin the process of crushing the chairman of the national republican committee by publishing the charges of defalcation made against him for months past by The New York World and other democratic papers and calling on him for an 'explanation. The rumor is not generally credited but it shows how desperate the radicals have become and how serious the split in the republican ranks is.

The programme of business for the rest of the session will be determined in onen senate this week. If the present understanding is carried out, Senator Quay, according to the notice given Saturday; will introduce his amended resolution tomerrow, which, under the rules, it is expected will go over until Tuesday for action. It will not be referred to the committee on rules, but will be disposed of in the senate. This course is desired by its author and he has the approval of Senator Aldrich, chairman of the committee on rules. When it comes up for consideration a motion will be made, probably by Mr. Hoar or Mr. Spooner to include the federal election bill in the list of measures that shall be considered after the tariff bill is disposed of. This is expected to precipitate a debate of some length and considerable bitterness between the two wings of the republican majority. Mr. Quay, and Mr. Aldrich, who is acting with him, believe the resolution will be passed by a good majority with no amendment.

When that matter is settled the tariff bill will be again taken up and pressed to a vote as rapidly as possible. The urgent deficiency appropriation bill reported last week will be called up tomorrow by Mr. Allison, and will be disposed of, if possible, at one sitting. A DAY FOR THE FARMEES. It is probable that tomorrow committees will be allowed to call up bills for passage under a suspension of the rules. London, August 16.—Lord Salisbury's last dispatch to Secretary Blaine is dated August 2d and in it he quotes from historical documents in support of his contention that England had refused to admit Russia's claim to exclusive jurisdiction over Behring sea as asserted in the ukase of 1821. He says:

It is impossible to admit that the right to fish and catch seals in the high seas can be held to be abandoned by a nation from the mere fact that for a certain number of years it has not suited the subjects of that nation to exercise such rights. It must be remembered that the existence of British Columbia as a colony and the development of the colony's shipping interests are comparatively recent.

LAMOINE IN MACON.

The Supposed Bigamist Claimed to Be Unmarried-The Search of His Ohio Wife-Other Macon News.

MACON, Ga., August 17 .- [Special.]-The special from Charlotte published in THE CON-STITUTION this morning, about the arrest of Charles G. Lamoine, on the charge of bigamy, and whose last escapade was an elopemen with Miss Corinne Neisler, has interest for me Maconitas.

Lamoine came to Macon in the early spring of this year, and assisted ir putting motors in the electric cars. It is pre ned he came here from Atlanta, from the Thompson-Houston headquarters. He boarded at the Hotel Lanier, wore fine clothes and had all the appearance of a swell.

THE CONSTITUTION is informed that Lancine would frequently come in the Hotel Lanier late at night and boast of the money he had won at poker. Frequently the amount of one night's winning would be from three to five hundred dollars. Lamoine remained at the hotel a month or so and left Macon just before the unveiling of the Lee statue at Richmond. It is presumed to went from Macon to Richmond. It appears from the Charlotte special that Lamoine and Miss Neisler eloped from Richmond soon after Lamoine left Macon. It also seems that Lamoine first came to Macon shortly after deserting his wife, Mrs. C. G. Lamoine, of Cincinnati. In Macon Lamoine claimed to be an unmarried

About three weeks ago a lady with a child came to Macon and stopped at the Hotel Lanier. She claimed to be Mrs. C. G. Lamoine, and was then on the track of her rec-reant and false husband, who she said her last April, which was soon after his appearance in Macon. Mrs. Lamoine left Macon in the pursuit of the gay deceiver, whom, it seems, she at last found in Manchester, N. H., and had him arrested on Friday, charged with bigamy. Since THE CONSTITUTION was last writte to on politics, the legislative situation has be-come simplified, but is liable to be badly mixed, and become much excited before the primary on September 2d.

As already announced, Hon. C. L. Bartlett has positively refused to be a candidate, and that he means what he says is shown in the fact that he left today for New York and Saratoga. Judge H. V. Washington as positively refuses to be a candidate. The only avowed candidates to date are W. A. Huff, R. W. Patterson and J. W. Willis. The names of Tracy Baxter and G. M. Davis are mentioned, but it is not known if either will con-sent to run. Mr. Baxter is put forward somewhat as the young mens' candidate, and many think the situation is ripe for a young man to make the race. It is thought that political matters will become very warm this week.

The county race remains as it was when THE CONSTITUTION was last written to, except that the candidates for clerk of the superio court and sheriff are beginning to stir about a

Macon, Ga., August 17.—[Special.]—Yesterday afternoon a white man named Jim Ross, and a negro, Lewis Wilson, were driving in a buggy near Mercer university. The white man was drunk, and kept hitting the horse with his hat. Wilson cautioned him, and said the horse would run away. Finally the animal became frightened and did run. Both men were thrown out of the buggy. The negro fell on his back across a ditch, was knocked in-sensible, and it is said his back was broken. The white man became very angry at the accident and commenced to curse and abuse the negro driver, and was in the act of jumping on him, while Wilson was lying suffering on the ground, when Mr. Abel interfered. The drunken fellow then turned his attention to him and threatened to cut him, whereupon Abel struck him a severe blow on the head with a stick, knocking him to the ground. The Macon and Dublin Road May Be Something Yet.

MACON, Ga., August 17. -[Special.]-The Macon and Dublin railroad people have been wery active the past few weeks, and some important developments may arise soon. The question with the public is, Will the company mell its franchises and right-of-way to the Macon and Atlantic, or will the company build the road from Macon to Dublin? It is build the road from Macon to Dublin? It is represented to THE CONSTITUTION that there is a large force at work grading and that track-laying will soon commence. Ralls and crosstics have been contracted for. It has been thought by many that the Macon and Dublin people have just been bluffing about building in order to force the Macon and Atlantic company to buy the franchise, etc. It is said that some time ago the Macon and Atlantic people, through Mr. W. B. Sparks, made a certain offer to the Macon and Dublin for its franchises, but the offer was declined as too small. Sparks, it is said, will not increase the price, and no further move may occur until the Macon and Atlantic appeals to the supreme court for a reversal of Judge Roberts's decision recently delivered at Dublin, which enjoins the Macon and Atlantic from building within ten miles of the Macon and Dublin, SAVING MONEY.

It is a fact not generally known, or specially appreciated, that much the larger per cent of the surplus money with which the general business of the country is carried on, is the savings of the laboring people. The capitalist is an investor, and the merchant a borrower. Neither, as a class, carry surplus money. Their credit and their securities render it unnecessary, but every prudent laboring man finds it necessary to have always within reach a little surplus money, and it is the accumulation in associations and banks of these small savings that largely makes up the banking and business capital of the country. Stocks, bonds and realty are the property of the capitalist, lands of the planter, merchandise of the trader, but money of the wage earner, and it is a surprising fact that three-fourths of that circulating medium called money is the property of the millions of prudent laboring people in the country. They are the money owners. Now, in view of this fact, it is of the highest importance to this large class that this, their only capital, be invested so as to give them the surest, most flexible, most reliable, and securest income until the passes from their possession into a home or some other form of permanent investment, when they cease to become strictly money owners, but investors or property i olders. The two most generally known institutions for this purpose are the loan and building associations and the savings banks. The object of each is to extend to men and women of small carnings an opportunity and an inducement to husband their savings and make them a source of revenue. The loan and building associations and the savings banks of the payment. The system is fixed, inflexible.

Now as to the savings bank. The investor can deposit his savings on any day, and in any amount. This denosit can he recalled to the stream of the part of the part of the payment. The system is fixed, indexible.

forthcoming on that fixed day or a fine is imposed that absorbs the earnings of that payment. The system is fixed, inflexible.

Now as to the savings bank. The investor can deposit his savings on any day, and in any amount. This deposit can be regulated to suit his earnings, begins drawing interest on the day of deposit, is always at his command, and can be drawn out, with accured interest, whenever misfortune demands, or the chance for permanent investment offers. He knows beyond contingency what he is getting for his money. Every night the calculation can be made exact. It is flexible. If fortune favors him this week, he can increase his savings, if misfortune shortens his profits next week, the amount already saved is not burdened with a fine. If he has in view a home, when he has saved enough to buy a lot, or make a partial payment on a house, he can easily secure the balance on long time, at less cost than through a loan and building association. The savings bank has all the advantages of the loan and building association, is more flexible and has none of its expensive features; holding the money at any moment subject to its owner's control and at a profit. The prosperity of the waye earners. They have largely succeeded the loan and building associations north and east and are now being extensively and successfully operated in the south. If today the meest perity of the wage earners. They have largely succeeded the loan and building associations north and east and are now being extensively and successfully operated in the south. If today the mechanics and shopmen should withdraw their deposits from the banks in the large northern cities, the result would be startling. They, in the aggregate, are the large depositors. Few banks are without a savings department.

The Atlanta Trust and Banking Company, to meet this demand in Atlanta, makes a special feature of its savings department. In fact, it is a savings bank, operated after the plan of the most successful of these institutions in the larger cities, with a paid in easital of $150,000 and a surplus of $50,000; managed by a board of directors composed of such practical business men as W. A. Hemphill, A. D. Adair, Charles B. Wilkinson, E. M. Blalock, W. R. Hanmond and George C. Selman, Sr. It offers to our laboring class of all trades, a save and profitable use of their surplus carnings. Savings deposits are received, in any amount from $1 up, and begin bearing interest on the day of deposit. Every deposit, however small, becomes at once a wage-carner, and, like every separate stalk of the fields, grows for itself. The highest rate of interest compatible with sound banking is paid. THE SO-CALLED NEW CHRIST TAKES OUT A MARRIAGE LICENSE.

BREAKING A RULE OF HIS SECT. Astonishing Revelations About His Conduc with Women Converts at "Heaven" Com-pel Him to Marry One of His Dupes.

ROCKFORD, Ill., August 17.—George Jacob Schweinfurth, who for the past eight years has been posing as "the new Christ," whose history has been told, has at last come to the end of his tether, at least in this vicinity. During the past week the public has learned that several children have been born at Schweinfurth's headquarters, "Heaven," near here, whose parents could show no marriage certificate Schweinfurth, when informed that the public knew of the matter, said that the children had been born as Christ was. This explanation angered the citizens of of organizing a regulating party and visiting Schweinfurth some dark night. This threat has apparently had effect upon Schweinfurth, for last night about 10 o'clock a disciple of "the new Christ" named Morgan drove to the city, hunted up the county clerk and took out a license for the marriage of George Jacob Schweinfurth, aged forty-two, and Mary L. Weldon, aged thirty-five.

A reporter who went to Schweinfurth's house, which is seven miles from the city, found it guarded by armed men. Schweinfurth denied that he had sent for a license, but there is abundant proof that he did from a memorandum in his own handwriting left with the county clerk by Morgan. His action in of organizing a regulating party and visiting the county clerk by Morgan. His action in getting a license does not allay the indignation getting a license does not allay the indignation of the people, as it is a practical admission of his guilt, and he cannot marry the other woman he has duped. There is still a chance for trouble, for some Rockford people believe Schweinfurth needs a coat of tar and feathers. Schweinfurth needs a coat of tar and feathers. The accusations made against Schweinfurth and the accounts of the immoral acts committed at "Heaven" came from Mrs. Kinehan. This woman left her husband a vear ago and went with her boy to Schweinfurth's place, for as she said she believed implicitly in "the new Christ." She even tried to have the Presbyterien church years because Schweinfurth. Christ." She even tried to have the Presbyterian church people here accept Schweinfurth as the Savior, but they would not and expelled her from the church. Last Tuesday she returned to this city and told her story. At "Heaven," she said, were twenty women and a dozen men, and Schweinfurth, she was sure, lived a very immoral life with the women. She had not been so won over to the new faith of the impostor as to be blind to the acts she saw, and Schweinfurth knew it. So he kept her in the kitchen from 7 o'clock in the morning to 10 at night, while the other women basked in his favor. Mrs. Kinehan accuses Mary Weldon, night, while the other women basked in his favor. Mrs. Kinchan accuses Mary Weldon, the unmarried daughter of the man who gave Schweinfurth 1,000 acres for a farm, as one of the chief offenders, and names as the other a Mrs. Tuttle, who it appears has two children who have been born at "Heaven." These children and those of Mary Weldon are called divine by Schweinfurth, and he does not allow them to play with the other children. Schweinfurth read of Mrs. Kinehan's charges in the newspapers and denied them.

charges in the newspapers and denied them. He said she was a peevish woman who was jealous of Mary Weldon and Mrs. Tuttle. He even went so far as to publish cards in the newspapers denying Mrs. Kinehan's accusations, but he did not deny the facts about the children. All the people at "Heaven," signed children. All the people at "Heaven" signed a card in which Mrs. Kinehan's charges were a card in which Mrs. Kinehan's charges were denied, but this did not have any effect on the people of Rockford. The Rev. S. L. Conde, engaged in mission work here, has been so wrought up by the disclosures about Schweinfurth that he has said that if the law cannot compel the impostor to stop his acts other means should be taken to rid the community of Schweinfurth. There is to be an encampment of the Knights Templar of the northern district of Illinois here next week, and the fiery clergyman has called upon "each chamflery clergyman has called upon "each cham-pion Sir Knight to defend the honor of that name most sacred in all true Masonic knight-hood."

The law, it seems, cannot touch Schwein-furth. The state's attorney says so. The only way the law could be invoked would be by some of the women bringing action against the impostor to compel him to support his children. All the women in "Heaven" now are so completely under Schweinfurth's control that they will not bringer the control that they will not bring such a suit, and even if one should do so no testimony could be secured from the other women.

Schweinfurth is head of the community of a sect founded fifteen years ago by Mrs. Dora Beekman, wife of a Congregational minister, who preached that she possessed the attributes of the risen Lord. The central church of her followers was at Byron, near Rockford. After a curiously change-able career, Schweinfurth became one of her followers, and finally head of the sect she founded, which has churches at Chicago, St. Charles, Minneapolis, Paw Paw, Louisville, Leavenworth and Kansas City, and members scattered in many other places. The head-quarters at Weldon Farm are sumptuously furnished, and the property, which is Schwein-furth's, is said to be worth half a million dol-lars.

The man who claims to be Christ in his second advent was born in Marion, Marion county, Ohio, of German parents, in 1853. In 1873 and 1874 he taught school near Jackson, Mich. In 1875 he was a student at Evanston, Ill., and in 1876 he went to Francisco, Mich. Later he went to his birthplace, where he made up his mind to be a preacher. He entered the Detroit Methodist conference on trial in 1877. His first and only appointment from a Methodist conference was in 1877 to the Alpena mission, Mich. At the conference of 1878, held at Ann Arbor, a committee recommended his discontinuance as a preacher on trial. Solweinfurth has never been a Methodist minister. His adherence to the faith taught by Mrs. Dora Beekman brought his progress towards admission Ill., and in 1876 he went to Francisco, Mich. herence to the faith taught by Mrs. Dora Beekman brought his progress towards admission to the Methodist ministry to a standstill.

Many stories have been told about the scandalous acts at "Heaven," but they were not generally believed, it being thought that Schweinfurth's aim was money, of which he has accumulated quite a store. Most of his money, however, was that brought to him by converts. Mrs. Kinehan, in her story, alleges that Schweinfurth took all the money her husband sent her for the support of her boy.

LEBANON, Pa., August 17 .- The American Farmers' Encampment at Mount Gretna, near this city, today listened attentively to a remarkable discourse by the great Brooklyn preacher, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, who arrived here yesterday from the Piedmont Chau tauqua, at Atlanta, Ga., where he spoke Wednesday last. The subject was one peculiarly suited to the vast audience, being or "Farming a Gospel Type," I. Kings 19:19— "Elisha the son of Shaphat, who was plowing with twelve oxen before him, and he with the twelfth."

Representatives of the great farmers' asso ciations from all parts of the country are at the encampment, preparations for which have been going on for months in advance. The surrounding densely populated counties of Pennsylvania are also fully represented. Today's services were held in the open air. An immense choir, from the churchesof Lebanon, led the music. Rev. Dr. Talmage spoke as follows:

ION.

1:42 6:00

Farmers of America! Accept my saluta-tion. Our text puts us down into the plow's furrow; where many of us have been before My boyhood passed on a farm, and my father a farmer, your style of life is familiar to me. One of my earliest recollections is that of my father coming in from the hot harvest field father coming in from the not harvest near exhausted, the perspiration streaming from his forehead and chin, and fainting on the doorsill, and my mother resuscitating him, until seeing the alarm of the household, he said: "Don't be frightened. I got a little tired, and the sun was hot, but I am all right now." And I remember mother seated at the table, often review. "Wall. I am too tired to eat!" The Well. I am too tired to eat! fact is, that I do not think the old folks got thoroughly rested until they lay down in the graveyard, back of Somerville, to take the last

Office seekers go through the land and they stand on political platforms, and they tell the farmers the story about the independent life of a farmer, giving flattery where they ought to give sympathy. Independent of, what? No class of people in this country have it harder than farmers. Independent of what? Of the country life that stipus the nearly reas? of the than farmers. Independent of what? Of the curculio that stings the peach trees? of the rust in the wheat? of the long rain with the rye down? Independent of the grasshopper? of the locust? of the army-worm? of the potato-bug? Independent of the drought that burns up the harvest? Independent of the cow with the hollow horn? or the sheep with the foot-rot? or the pet horse with a nail in his hoof? Independent of the cold that freezes out the winter grain? Independent of the snowbank out of which he must shovel himself? Independent of the cold weather when he snowbank out of which he must shovel himself? Independent of the cold weather when he stands thrashing his numbed fingers around his body to keep them from being frosted? Independent of the frozen ears and the frozen feet? Independent of what? Fancy-farmers who have made their fortunes in the city and go out in the country to build houses with all the modern improvements, and make farming a Juxury, may not need any solace; but the yeomanry who get their living out of the soil, and who that way have toclothe their families and educate their children, and pay their taxes and meet the interests on mortgaged farms and educate their children, and pay their taxes and meet the interests on mortgaged farms—such men find a terrific struggle. And my hope is that this great National Farmers' Encampment may do something toward lifting the burdens of the agriculturists. Yes, we were nearly all of us born in the country. We dropped corn in the hill, and went on Saturday to the mill, tying the grist in the center of the sack so that the contents on either side the horse balanced each other; and drove the cattle afield, our bare feet wet with the dew, and rode the horses with the halter to the brook until we fell off, and hunted the mow for nests until the feathered occupants went cackling away. So we all understand mow for nests until the feathered occupants went cackling away. So we all understand rustic allusions. The Bible is full of them. In Christ's sermon on the Mount, you see the full-blown lifes and the glossy back of the crow's wing as it flies over Mount Olivet. David and John, Paul and Isaiah find in country life a source of frequent illustration, while Christ takes the responsibility of calling while Christ takes the responsibility of calling God a farmer, declaring: "My Father is the

Noah was the first farmer. We ssy nothing about Cain, the tiller of the soil. Adam was a gardener on a large scale, but to Noah were given all the acres of the earth. Elisha was given all the acres of the earth. Elisha was an agriculturist, not culturing a ten-acre lot, for in my text you find him plowing with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and he with the twelfth. In Bible times the land was so plenty and the inhabitants so few, that Noah was right when he gave to every inhabitant a certain portion of land; that land, if cultured, was recorded to be his own recognition to be his own recognition to be his own recognition.

certain portion of land; that land, if cultured, ever after to be his own possession.

They were not small crops raised in those times, for though the arts were rude, the plow turned up very rich soil, and barley, and cotton, and flax, and all kinds of grain came up at the call of the harvesters. Pliny tells of one stalk of grain that had on it between three and four hundred ears. The rivers and the brooks, through artificial channels, were brought down to the roots of the corn, and to this habit of turning a river wherever it was wanted. Soloturning a river wherever it was wanted, Solo-mon refers when he says: "The king's heart is in the hand of the Lord, and He turneth it as the rivers of water are turned, whithersoever

The wild beasts were caught, and then a The wild beasts were caught, and then a hook was put into their nose, and then they were led over the field, and to that God refers when He says to wicked Sennacherib: "I will put a hook in thy nose and I will bring thee back by the way that thou camest." And God has a hook in every man's nose, whether it be Nebuchadnezzar or Ahab or Herod. He may think himself very independent, but some time in his life or in the hour of his death, he will find that the Lord Almighty has a hook in his nose.

This was the rule in regard to the culture of This was the rule in regard to the culture of the ground: "Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together," illustrating the folly of ever putting intelligent and useful and pliable men in association with the stubborn and unmanageable. The vast majority of troubles in the churches and reformatory institutions comes from the disregard of this command of the Lord: "Thou shalt not plow with an ox the Lord: "Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together."

There were large amounts of property invested in cattle. The Moabites paid 100,000 theep as an annual tax. Job had 7,000 sheep, 3,000 camels, 500 yoke of oxen. The time of vintage was ushered in with mirth and music. The clusters of the vine were put into the wine press, and then five men would get into the press and trample out the juice from the grape until their garments were saturated with the wine and had become the emblem of Jesus Christ himself, wounded until covered with the blood of crucifixion, made use of this allusion when the question was asked: "Wherefore art thou red in thine appared and thy garments like one who treadeth the wine-vat?" He responded: "I have trodden the wine-press. slone."

responded: "I have trodden the wine-press shone."

In all ages there has been great honor paid to agriculture. Seven-eighths of the people in every country are disciples of the plow. A government is strong in proportion as it is supported by an athletic and industrious yeomanry. So long ago as before the fall of Carthage, Strabo wrote twenty-eight books on agriculture; Hesiod wrote a poem on the same subject—"The Works and Days." Cato was prouder of his work on husbandry than all of his military conquests. But P must not be tempted into a discussion of agricultural conquests. Standing amid the harvests and orchards and vineyards of our own country I want to run out the analogy between the production of crops and the growth of grace in the soul—all these sacred writers making use of that analogy.

In the first place I remark in grace as in the

for a hundred dollars more than any previous year, then the young; man took the hint as to what his father meant when he said there were a hundred dollars buried, down in that field. Deep plowing for a crop. Deep plowing for a soul. He who makes light of sin will never amount to anything in the church or in the world. If a man speaks of sin as though it were an inaccuracy or a mistake, instead of the loathsome, abominable, consuming and damning thing that God hates, that man will never yield a harvest of usefulness.

When I was a boy I plowed a field with a team of spirited horses. I plowed it very quickly. Once in a while I passed over some of the sod without turning it, but I did not jerk back the plow with its rattling clevises. I thought it made no difference. After awhile my father came along and said: "Why, this will never do; this isn't plowed deep enough; there you have missed this and you have missed that." And he plowed it over again. The difficulty with a great many people is that they are only scratched with conviction when the subsoil plow of God's truth ought to be put in up to the beam.

My word to all Sunday school teachers, to all parents, to all Christian workers—plow deep! And if in your own personal experience you are apt to take a lenient view of the sinful side of your nature, put down into your soul the ten commandments which reveal the holiness of God, and that sharp and glittering coulter will turn up your soul to the deepest depths. If a man preaches to you thatyou are only a little out of order by reason of sin and that you need only a little fixing-up, he deceives! You have suffered an appailing injury by reason of sin. There are quick poisons and slow poisons, but the druggist could give you one drop that would kill the body. And sin is like that drug; so virulent, so poisonous, so fatal that one drop is enough to kill the soul.

Deep plowing for a crop. Deep plowing for a soul. Broken heart or no religion. Eroken soule ron harvest. Why was it that to kill the soul.

Deep plowing for a crop. Deep plowing for a soul. Broken heart or no religion. Broken soul or no harvest. Why was it that David and the jailer and the publican and Paul made such ado about their sins? Had they lost their senses? No. The ploughshare struck them. Conviction turned up a great many things that were forgotten. As a farmer plowing sometimes turns up the skeleton of a man or the anatomy of a monster long ago buried, so the plowshare of conviction turns up the ghastly skeletons of sin long ago ena man or the anatomy of a monster long ago buried, so the plowshare of conviction turns up the ghastly skeletons of sin long ago entombed. Geologists never brought up from the depths of the mountain mightier ichthyosaurus or megatherium.

But what means all this crooked plowing, these crooked furrows, the repentance that amounts to nothing, the repentance that ends in nothing? Men groan over their sins, but get no better. They weep, but their tears are not counted. They get convicted, but not converted What is the reason? I remember that on the farm we set a standard with a red flag at the other end of the field. We kept our eye on that. We aimed at that. We plowed up to that. Losing sight of that we made a crooked furrow. Keeping our eyes on that we made a straight furrow. Now in this matter of conviction we must have some standard to guide us. It is a red standard that God has set at the other end of the field. It is the cross. Keeping your eye on that you will make a crooked furrow. Plow up to the cross. Aim not at either end of the horizontal piece of the cross, but at the upright piece, at the center of it, the heart of the Son of God who bore your sins and made satisfaction. Crying and weeping will not bring you through. "Him hath God exalted to be a Prince and a Savior to give repentance." Oh, plow up to the cross!

a Prince and a Savior to give repentance."
Oh, plow up to the cross!

Again, I remark, in grace as in the fields there must be a sowing. In the autumnal weather you find a farmer going across the field at a stride of about twenty-three inches, and at every stride he puts his hand into the sack of grain and he sprinkles the seed-corn over the field. It looks silly to a man who does not know what he is doing. He is doing a very important work. He is scattering the winter grain, and though the snow may come, the next year there will be a great crop. Now, the next year there will be a great crop. Now, that is what we are doing when we are preaching the gospel—we are scattering the seed. It that is what we are doing when we are preaching the gospel—we are scattering the seed. It is the foolishness of preaching, but it is the winter grain; and though the snow of worldliness may come down upon it, it will yield after awhile glorious harvest. Let us be yield after awhile glorious harvest. Let us be sure we sow the right kind of seed. Sow mullen stalk and mullen stalk will come up. Sow Canada thistles and Canada thistles will come up. Sow wheat and wheat will come up. Let us distinguish between truth and error. Let us know the difference between wheat and hellebore, oats and henbane.

The largest denomination in this country is the denomination of Nothingariaus. Their re-

The largest denomination in this country is the denomination of Nothingarians. Their religion is a system of negations. You say to one of them, "What do you believe?" "Well, I don't believe in infant baptism." "What do you believe?" "Well, I don't believe in the perseverance of the saints." "Well, now tell me what you do believe?" "Well, I don't believe in the eternal punishment of the wicked?" So their religion is a row of ciphers. Believe something and teach it; or, to resume the figure of my text, scatter abroad the right kind of seed.

A minister in New York preached a sermon calculated to set the denominations of Christian quarreling. He was sowing nettles. A minister in Boston advertised that he would preach a sermon on the superiority of transcendental and organized forces to untranscendental and organized forces to untranscendental and organized forces to untranscendental and unorganized forces. What was he sowing? The Lord Jesus Christ nineteen centuries ago planted the divine seed of doctrine. It sprang up. On one side of the stalk are all the churches of Christendom. On the other side of the stalk are all the churches of Christendom. On the other side of the stalk are all the churches of Christendom. On the other side of the stalk are all the free governments of the earth, and on top there shall be a flowering millennium after awhile. All from the gospel seed of doctrine. Every word that a parent or Sabbath-school teacher, or city missionary, or other Christian worker speaks for Christ comes up. Yea, it comes up with compound interest—you saving one soul, that one saving ten, the ten a hundred, the hundred a thousand one hundred thousand—on, on forever.

Again, I remark, in grace as in the farm there must be a harrowing. I refer now, not to a harrow that goes over the field in order to prepare the ground for the seed, but a harrow which goes over after the seed is sown, lest the birds pick up the seeds, sinking it down into the earth so that it can take root. There are new kinds of harrows, but the harrow that goes over the field in order to prepare the ground for the seed, but a harrow into the earth so that it can take root. There are new kinds of harrows, but the harrow into the earth until it sprung up in the harvest. Bereavement, sorrow, persecution are the Lord's harrows to sink the gospel truth into your heart. There were truths that you heard thirty years ago, that have not affected you until recently. Some great trouble came ov

In all ages there has been great honor paid to agriculture. Seven-eighths of the people in every country are disciples of the plow. A government is strong in proportion as it is supported by an athletic and industrious yed marry. So long ago as before the fall of Carthage, Strabo wrote twenty-eight books on agriculture; Hesiod wrote a poem on the same subject—"The Works and Days." Cato was prouder of his work of husbandry than all of his military conquests. But P must not be tempted into a discussion of agricultural conquests. Standing amid the harvests and orchards and vineyards of our own country I want to run out the analogy between the production of crops and the growth of grace in the soul—all these sacred writers making use of that analogy.

In the first place I remark, in grace as in the fields there must be a new plow. That which theologians call conviction is only the plow-whare turning up the sins that have been rooted and matted in the soul. A farmer said dollars buried deep in that field." The son went to work and plowed the field from fence to fence, and he plowed the fie your green spectacles, your blue spectacles, your black spectacles. Pull up the corners of your mouth as far as you pull them down. To the fields! Reap! reap!

Again, I remark, in grace as in farming there is a time for threshing. I tell you bluntly that is death. Just as a farmer beats the wheat out of the straw, so death beats the soul out of the body. Every sickness is a stroke of the fiail, and the sick-bed is the threshing-floor. What, say you, is death to a good man only taking the wheat out of the straw? That is all. An aged man has fallen asleep. Only yesterday you saw him in the sunny porch playing with his grandchildren. Caimly he received the message to leave this world. He bade a pleasant good-by to his old friends. The telegraph carries the tidings, and on swift rail-trains the kindred come, waiting once more to look on the face of dear old grandfather. Brush back the gray hairs from his brow; it will never ache again. Put him away in the slumber of the tomb. He will not be afraid of that night. Grandfather was never afraid of anything. He will rise in the morning of the resurrection. Grandfather was always the first to rise. His voice has already mingled in the doxology of heaven. Grandfather always did sing in church. Anything ghastly in that? No. The threshing of the wheat out of the straw. That is all.

The Savior folds a lamb in His bosom. The little child filled all the house with her music and her toys are scattered all up and down the stairs just as she left them. What if the hand and her toys are scattered all up and down the stairs just as she left them. What if the hand that plucked four-o'clocks out of the meadow is still? It will wave the eternal triumph. What if the voice that made music in the home is still? It will sing the eternal hosanna. Put a white rose in one hand, and a red rose in the other hand, and a wreath of orange blossoms on the brow; the white flower for the victory, the red flower for the Savior's sacrifice, the orange blossoms for her marriage day. Anything ghastly about that? Oh, no. The sun went down and the flower shut. The wheat threshed out of the straw. "Dear Lord, give me sleep," said a dying boy; the son of one of my elders, "Dear Lord, give me sleep."

And he closed his eyes and awoke in glory. Henry W. Longfellow, writing a letter of condolence to those parents, said: "Those last words were beautifully poetic. "Dear Lord, give me sleep,"

"'Twas not in cruelty, not in wrath That the reaper came that day; 'Twas an angel that visited the earth And took the flower away."

Twas an angel that visited the earth
And took the flower away."

So it may be with us when our work is all done. "Dear Lord, give me sleep."
I have one more thought to present. I have spoken of the plowing, of the sowing, of the harrowing, of the reaping, of the threshing. I must now speak a moment of the garnering.
Where is the garner? Need I tell you? Oh,
no. So many have gone out from your own circles—yea, from your own family, that you have had your eyes on that garner for many a year. What a hard time some of them had! In Gesthsemanes of suffering, they sweat great drops of blood. They took the "cup of trembling" and they put it to their hot lips and they cried: "If it be possible let this cup pass from me." With tongues of Jurning agony they eried: "O Lord, deliver my soul!" But they got over it. They all got over it. Garnered!
Their tears wiped away; their battless all ended; their burdens lifted. Garnered! The Lord of the harvest will not allow those sheaves to perish in the equinox. Garnered! Some of us remember, on the farm, that the sheaves were put on the top of the rack, which surof us remember, on the farm, that the sheaves were put on the top of the rack, which surmounted the wagon, and these sheaves werepiled higher and higher, and after a while the horses started for the barn; and these sheaves swayed to and fro in the wind, and the old wagon creaked, and the horses made a struggle, and pulled so hard the harness came up in loops of leather on their back, and when the front wheel struck the elevated floor of the barn it seemed as if the load would go no farther until the workmen gave a great shout, and then with one last tremendous strain, the horses pulled in the gave a great shout, and then with one last tremendous strain, the horses pulled in the load; then they were unharnessed, and forkful after forkful of grain fell into the mow. O, my friends, our getting into heaven may be a pull, a hard pull, a very hard pull; but these sheaves are bound to go in. The Lord of the harvest has promised it. I see the load at last coming in the door of the heavenly garner. The sheaves of the Christian soul sway to and fro in the wind of death, and the old body creaks under the load, and as the load strikes the floor of the celestial garner, it seems as if it can go no farther. It and as the look strikes the hoof of the closestal garner, it seems as if it can go no farther. It is the last struggle, until the voices of angels and the voices of our departed kindred and the welcoming voice of God shall send the harvest rolling into the eternal trumph, while all up and down the sky the cry is heard: "Harvest home!"

"Why, now I cannot get enough to eat," says one lady who formerly had no appetite but took Heed's Sarsapanilh.

The physicians declared her case incurable and predicted that her life would come to a speedy end. After taking S. S. Strikes Come High.

The position of Grand Master Workman Powderly, of the Knights of Labor, is by no means a pleasant one. He has proven himself equal to all emergencies, but it must be confessed that the demands upon him are weighty and trying in the extreme. He must be a great and resourceful general to manage successfully the mutinies which arise in his camp and guide through stormy seas the ship of labor into the port

But the frequent occurrence of strikes has not only taxed Mr. Powderly's resources, but, it is stated, threatens to seriously impair the financial strength of the order he represents. Heavy demands upon the treasurer have been made from time to time in order to sustain and carry to a successful issue former intended strikes; but it is figured that the strike on the New York Central has had a more disastrous financial effect than was at first anticipated. An estimate places the daily loss in wages by the strike at $15,000, and the total loss out of the treasury of the order during the continance of the strike has been $180,000.

As far as could be, Mr. Powderly's influence has been exerted to prevent strikes at all times; and from the above figures it will be seen how necessary prevention is, and how ruinous to the finances of the order a great strike can be.

It is said that several thousand strikers are likely to be idle for some time to come; these will be pensioners upon the knights until they are reinstated, or procure other employment; hence, it will be seen that the burden of the strike is not temporary, but extends into the future.

The order will meet demands which may be made upon it, notwithstanding the statement that the frequency of assessments has caused dissatisfaction in the ranks. But it cannot be doubted that Mr. Powderly has his hands full, so to speak, and that strikes like that of the New York Central have a depressing and demoralizing effect.

Swinburne and the Czar.

Mr. Charles Algernon Swinburne has evilently been reading Mr. Kennan's articles on Siberia, or has been observing the daily trend of affairs in Russia, for his muse has assumed a patriotic and denunciatory tone, quite out of keeping with the love ballads with which it is more famliarly associated.

In a word, the poet of French and English passion has had his anger aroused by the cruelties of Russian despotism, and he has assailed the czar and his government in verse of fire. This assault is an outburst of fire frenzy; and while allowing somewhat for poetic license, there can be no doubt that the czar deserves much of the abuse which Mr. Swinburne heaps upon him. Here is a fine sample:

set beside this truth, his deadliest vision seems Pale and pure and painless as a virgin's dreams. Maidens dead beneath the clasping lash, and Rent with deadlier pangs than death-for shame

Naked, mad, starved, scourged, spuri

joys,
Age made one with youth and torture, girls with boys, These, and worse, if aught be worse than these things are, Prove thee regent, Russia-praise thy mercy,

One cannot imagine bitterer or more burning invective than the above. One can hardly believe that it came from the same inspired pen which has recently been employed in writing child songs and tracing the track of love on "wind-blown petals of the Mr. Swinburne continues:

Pity mad with passion, anguish mad with shame, Call aloud on justice by her darker name; Love grows hate for love's sake; life takes death

Night hath none but one red star-Tyranicide. God or man, be swift; hope sickens with delay; Smite, and send him howling down his father's

He goes on in this strain through many ringing stanzas, and the conclusion of the whole matter is—
Help is none in heaven; hope sees no gentler

Earth is hell, and hell bows down before the

It is our opinion that if the poets of Russia would sing in this stirring and exciting strain the death-knell of tyrranny would soon be heard throughout the length and breadth of the land. But they can't afford to do it, with the grim menace of Siberia before them. Mr. Swinburne sings at safe distance, and no good or harm will come of his poem, for there is no danger of its slipping through the Russian mails. The censor will suppress it, and the czar will not have the pleasure of reading it. Improvement of the Public Roads.

Since the road congress assembled in Georgia some months ago the question of improving the public highways of the country has been largely agitated in various of states. Not very long ago the governor of Pennsylvania wrote a special message on the subject, and the prominent people in the various counties of the state have interested themselves in the matter.

There was some consolation in this mesage for us. We had been of the opinion that the roadways of the south were in a great deal worse condition than those of the north. But from the descriptions that have been given of the highways in some of the states north of us, we are inclined to believe that the south, especially Georgia, is not so far behind the age after all. The movement in favor of improving the ads, which had its active origination in Georgia, has spread not only to Pennsylvania, but to New York, where a State Roads rovement Association has been formed. This association is only six months old, but it is controlled by men who are determined o redeem the state from its reputation for bad roads.

There are various interests behind the movement in New York that could be very readily enlisted in Georgia. One is the in terest the farmers have in market roads that are passable at all seasons of the year. Another is the interest of the landed proprietors in the permanent improvement of their holdings. It is difficult to estimate the real increase in the value of farms and unoccupied lands that are approachable by good roads.

Then there is the interest that the people of the whole state have in the permanent improvement of their highways. This in terest is broader and more important than the interest of any individual, and when the matter is thoroughly agitated it will result in a system of state improvement which will be carried on in co-operation with the county and community authorities.

Meanwhile, a great deal can be done at once by the county authorities. Wherever the roads are worked permanent improvements can be made. These improvements may be small and insignificant at first, but they will grow in importance and value each year. Georgia, we hope, will lead the way in this great reform.

Pension Patriotism.

The poet Whittier has just written some verses on the broad and fertile subject of our country. In the last stanza the poet truthfully remarks: "Oh, land of lands! to thee we give our love, our trust, our service

This is pure poetry, for it is not fact. Mr. Whittier can speak for himself, but not for that large contingent of the grand army which is backing the pension-grabbers. In Boston the other day, General Alger informed the Grand Army of the Republic that the expenditures for pensions this year would amount to $150,000,600. This statement was loudly applauded by some of the patriots, and the applause shows pretty clearly the temper of those who gave their ervice to the country "free."

Here is the spectacle of a congregation of patriots demanding more pensions—the spectacle of a people paying themselves a salary for having saved the country. The expenditures for pensions this year exceeds the combined pension lists of the rest of the world, and are $60,000,000 more than the tatal cost of Germany's great standing army.

There is no doubt about the attitude of the whole country on the subject of pensions. Veterans disabled in the war should be amply pensioned. There is no objection to this even at the south, where the people are preparing to take care of the confederate veterans in a proper manner; but, as The New York World suggests, the tone of some of the speeches made in Boston, especially that of Ben Butler, is not calculated to give the public a very exalted idea of the patriotism of the survivors.

According to General Butler, the northern soldiers, when they went in to save the union, made a bargain; that the country still owes them a debt which they should compel it to pay. These things leave a very bad taste in the mouth. Those who are dancing around now demanding service pensions place the troops who fought for the union in the attitude of hirelings and mercenaries.

South Carolina's Danger.

The address of the so-called 'straightout democrats, who seceded from the democratic convention at Columbia, has been published, and if it is satisfactory to those whom the seceding delegates represent, we suppose that people outside the state have no right to complain; but the condition of affairs which these minority delegates have precipitated is important to the whole south, Every southerner is interested in the outcome of a democratic split which promises to turn South Carolina over to negro rule

We have examined the address of these straightout democrats with great care for the purpose of discovering, if possible, a rational reason for a movement fraugh with such serious results for the people of South Carolina. If this reason exists we are bound to say that it is not to be found in the address of the straightout democrats, and the only conclusion which can be arrived at by an im partial person is that the straightout delegates, anxious for an excuse to precipitate a division in the party, seized at last upon a most frivolous device. It seems to us impossible that their action. taking all the conditions that exist in South Carolina into consideration, can be endorsed even by the prejudices of those who are most hotly opposed to Tillman. It certainly is not justified by the frivolous reason which the seceding delegates have, spread forth in their address. They declare that the convention, instead of transacting the business for which it was called, proceeded to take action looking to the adoption of a new constitution, making many important changes in that instrument. They protested in vain, giving various authorities going to show that the authority of a convention is limited by the terms of its call, and then, finding all protests useless, they proceeded to withdraw from the convention, and to set up a faction in opposition to the majority. It is surprising that sensible men, in the face of the danger that hangs over South Carolina, should set up such an excuse as this for dividing the party. Let every complaint that has been put forward by the socalled straightouts be conceded, and what then? Mr. Tillman has abused the democratic leaders; very well. The convention has transcended its authority; let that be conceded. But does it mend matters for the minority democrats, by setting up an opposing faction, to turn the fair state of South Carolina over to the degradation of republican and negro rule? Is not the remedy proposed by the minority ten thousand times worse than the offenses committed by Tillman and the convention of the people? Does it help matters in the least to destroy the party? The democrats of South Carolina appear to be blind indeed. The spirit of destruction seems to have seized them. As the leading newspaper of South Carolina-and we say it in no unfriendly spirit-The Charleston News and Courier has not come up to the full measure of its duty in the crisis that has been threatened in Carolina. A newspaper that is supposed to represent the democratic people cannot, without in jury to the cause of democracy, devote itself to building up a democratic faction in the plained of by the straightouts? There was Mr. Tillman, in the first place—what was the remedy for him? Why, nothing short of an appeal to the democratic people. The appeal was made-not in very good taste for in very good temper—and Tillman was overwhelmingly endorsed. That matter was settled, if a democratic majority ever settles anything. Then there was the unwarranted exercise of authority on the part of the democratic convention, fresh from the people, and thoroughly understanding their purposes and their desires. What is the remedy here? Another appeal to the people. There is no other reasonable remedy known to party methods. But the minority of the convention-and it is a very insignificant minority indeedhas seceded from the party councils, and proposes, we are told, to organize a democratic faction of its own, call a convention and nominate candidates. All this is perfeetly feasible. So is suicide in its various forms. We may say, however, that there is neither common sense nor patriotism in the action of the minority. There is already a large negro majority in South Carolina, and any division in the democratic party will restore organized activity to this black majority. For the disaster and ruin that will surely follow democratic division, the so-called straightouts will be held responsible

THE GRAND ARMY cheered General Alger as 'our next president." At that very time little Mr. Benjamin Harrison was in Boston, and probably within hearing of the cheers.

"Congress," remarks the Courier-Journal, "isn't exactly boycotting the south, but it is doing all it can to injure southern business." Our esteemed contemporary seems to be getting where it can appreciate THE CONSTITUTION'S

He was always in demand at Methodist Sunday school institutes, and at one of these gatherings, as he used to tell, he was com pletely dumfounded by a bright youngster in this manner: He was making an address after another speaker, who had reminded the children that it was Washington's birthday. Said General Fisk:

"Of course you all know, children, about George Washington, whose birthday this is. He was a general. Now, I am a general also. Can any one of you tell what is the difference between Washington and myself?"

At the farthest end of the room a small ooyish voice eagerly exclaimed: "I know

"Well, what is the difference?" asked General Fisk, with a smile of encouragement. "General Washington couldn't tell a lie sir!" was the exultant reply, which sent the older persons present into a roar of laughter, in which the general himself joined as heartily as ago for a couple of hours when the papers were full of the Haymarket anarchist tragedy at Chicago, and there was bitter denunciation of the murderous bomb-throwers, writes Carson Lake, in The New York Press. General Fish said to me: "I have endeavored conscientiously to study the causes that make men anarchists in this country, but have never been able to comprehend it. You will surprised when I tell have gone in old clothes and slouch hat to anarchist meetings in New York city—to their most secret meetings. I have been amazed and astounded as well at the intemperance of their language until I have gone away feeling that society was rocking on a slumbering volcano, liable at any oment to burst forth and destroy it. Why, I have heard these men openly advocate arming themselves and rushing out to capture the United States subtreasury in Wall street, the persons of Gould, the Vanderbilts, Russell Sage, Cyrus W. Field and other wealthy men, and by these means make themselves mas of the community. While I was in their heated assembly chambers my head would actually swirl thinking of the desperate propositions they made. But once outside in the cool air, with a glimpse of the policeman standing on the corner nonchalantly swinging his club, the whole thing went out of my mind like a vision or a dream. The sight of the policeman alone dispelled every possible feeling of any danger to come.

The English are Ignorant. The ignorance of the English is perhaps ore versatile than among any other civilized and enlightened nation on earth, writes Eugene Field in a recent letter to The Chicago News. No one man in ten'can tell you how many counties there are in England, not one in fifty the population of Manchester, not one in a thousand the names of the monarchs of England. These people actually know nothing about These people actuary know nothing about the city in which they live. The sentinel stationed in front of Marlborough house will tell you, perhaps, that 'Is Royal 'Ighness lives there, but he doesn't know the name of the house. A he doesn't know the name of the house. A policeman, who for twelve years had walked the beat in which the great banking house of the Barings is located, was unable to direct me to that famous institution—said he had never heard the name before. Distance is reckoned wholly by time. It is four hours to Liverpool, seventy minutes to Harwich, twenty minutes to South Kensington, etc. Talk to an Englishman about miles, and he simply gapes at you in idiotic wonderment.

The Latest Fad.

A writer in The New Orleans Picayune disourses at some length about the man with the A man with little or no stomach to speak of can very well hang his trousers on his hips, if they are light-weight trousers, get through the day very well without suspenders, he writes; but, as a matter of fact, he never feels quite sure of himself or his clothes He acquires an ungraceful habit of hitching up his trousers every few minutes-a sort of land marine motion, in imitation of the stage Jack Tar-or feeling nervously with his hands to assure himself that they are up. The man without suspenders is generally a cigar-ette smoker, and that makes his troubles greater. If his hands are also wet or dirty from his work, he will try to give a hitch-up to his trousers with the back of his hands or wrists, still holding his cigarette. If he is sitting down in society or some place of amusement, he must give the habitual hitch-up to his trousers when he arlses.

The suspenderless young man playing billiards gives his trousers a hitch-up he chalks his cue. There is a street-car line so overkind to its underpaid drivers that it allows them in hot weather to work without coats, vests or suspenders. Ladies are obliged to see them, and they are always made nervous for fear the poor drivers, when making change, twisting their brakes or beating their mules, will forget to hitch up at the proper moment. Their money belts are on loosely, and there is a general untidiness about the suspenderless driver that tells against the company. There are men so nice that they would not have in their employ men who did not wear suspenders. That seems he chalks his cue. There is a street-car lin that they would not have in their employ men who did not wear suspenders. That seems a little absurd; but they argue that such men waste a great deal of valuable time hitching up their trousers, and that such time belongs to the employer, and not to the owner of the trousers. To overcome this hitching habit, to be graceful at all times, and to satisfy employers, a New Haven man has invented a want long felt. His invention is a very simple one, and consists of wearing the very simple one, and consists of wearing the suspenders next to the undershirt, the silk cotton or flannel shirt being outside. At the At the waist of the outer shirt horizontal siits are cut and stitched like buttonholes. Through these slits and straps of the suspenders are brought and fastened on the trousers. A broad belt or sash covers the waistband, slits and straps, and the result is a belt effect with a suspender

With this invention on, a man can still play billiards and continue cigarette-smoking; he can wear his negligee silk or flannel, or flow-ing-bosomed linen lawn shirts, without a vest, only a sash about his waist, having no sus-penders in sight. He may dress like a dude or a steamboat mate if he will, but he will alor a steamboat mate it ne will, but he will al-ways appear genteel and manly and graceful, with no troubled expression on his face. He appears to have no suspenders on, yet he al-ways has the suspenderless man at an advan-tage. He has confidence, and is always dead sure of his trousers.

A Family of Fighters.

A Mr. M. C. Moyer, of West Virginia, has been telling The New York Sun of a famous family living-or which did live-near Moundsville, in that state. The family name

"The father of that family, Charles Rran-don," says Mr. Moyer, "died when he was ninety-six years old, but his youngest child was then less than a year old. He died just as was then less than a year out the civil war broke out from a broken heart, his wife having refused to live with him any longer, and brought suit for divorce against him. He had at the time thirty-five living children, and had been married three times His first wife bore him only two children. Hi

At the age of seventy-five he married Sarah Barker, she being sixteen and the youngest of sixteen children. She lived with him twentyone years, bearing him fifteen children, and then left him, taking her year-old baby with her, and sued for a divorce on the grounds of incompatibility of temper. Brandon was then still hale and hearty, but the desertion of his wife broke him down, and he died within a month after she left him.

"When his third wife married him the oldest of his twenty children by his two previous wives was thirty-nine, and the entire twenty lived under the paternal roof. The young wife reared all of the twenty that were young enough to need rearing, beside caring for the fitteen of her own, the oldest of whom was but twenty when she left their father. The family of thirty-five kept together for many years after their father's death, and if the patriarchal Brandon had lived a few months longer he Brandon had lived a few months longer he would have seen seventeen of his sons enlist in the union army. It is a question if in this or any other country an instance can be found where one family ever before contributed seventeen sons to their country's service. There were two Charleses and two Johns among these brothers. The names of the other thirteen were Simeon, Evans, Peter, Josephus, Hiram, James, Van Buren, Jacob, Abraham, Alexander, David, Andrew, and Ruse. Besides these, three of Charles Brandon's sons served in the Mexican war. The seventeen brothers were all in Ohio and Ireon had lived a few months don's sons served in the Mexican war. The seventeen brothers were all in Ohio and Indiana regiments. Two of them, one of the Johns and one of the Charleses, were sons of the third Mrs. Brandon. They were both taken prisoners at the battle of Chickamauga and placed in Andersonville prison. John died in the prison. Charles was there twenty-one months when he escaped. All the rest of the sons were children of the second wife. "These boys all came of good fighting stock, for their father was a famous Indian fighter himself, and a veteran of the war of 1812 and the Mexican war. When western Pennsylvania was the frontier, and the Indian fighter. nia was the frontier, and the Indian fighter was the most important and indispensable person in the settlements, Charles Brandon, according to all tradition, was one of the best and most daring of all the active foes of the red men. His father was killed by Indians when Charles was only three years old. He himself was made a prisoner, and lived with the Indians twelve years, hating them more the longer he was with them. At the age of fifteen he escaped, and, after learning his mother tongue, spent all his time till they were driven away to more remote settlements in hunting and killing Indians. He was fifty-one years of age when the war of 1812 broke out, and he was one of the first to join the American army, and was in it when peace was declared. He was seventy-four when he enlisted in the Mexican war. in the Mexican war.

A Lawyer's Question.

Apropos of railway strikes James S. Norton, a prominent western lawyer, says, in the Sep-tember Scribner's: "If a corporation is held to strict performance of its duty as a public servant, should not its agents, who live upon its business, be held to some account—at least for combinations made to obstruct a public service as a means to satisfy the per-grudge of a few individuals?"

We Have Much to Learn.

Notwithstanding the fact that the United States have been weaned from England for upwards of 114 years, still they might learn a few things from her at this late day, and one of them is how to take the census of the population in a quick and systematic manner. Clerk Childs and Professor Blodgett, of the census office, yesterday showed a Washington Post reporter the census of the provinces of Bengal, Calcutta and Bombay, compiled by I. A. Bourdillon, inspector general of registration for the province of Bengal, and other books and pamphlets bearing upon the same subject. General Bourdillon made all his prepara-tions, and then took the census of the provinces in one day. He divided the country in circles, subcircles and flocks, and these divided, subdivided, and re-subdivided districts were under divided, and re-subdivided districts were under the management of seventy-two paid supervis-ors, 1,323 paid enumerators, 13,943 unpaid su-pervisors, and 191,059 unpaid enumerators, and, at an hour previously agreed upon on February 17, 1881, the work began, and was finished on the morning of the 18th. The questions asked related to age, sex, civil of conjugal condition, religion, caste or sect, birthplace, mother tongue, degree of educaconjugal condition, religion, caste or sect, birthplace, mother tongue, degree of education, occupation and infirmities.

The census of all the British possessions was ary 17th, but only one day is ever consumed in taking the census of any of the provinces or cities of the empire. To show the wonder of the undertaking read this list of places and their official population in round numbers: Census of 1881, United Kingdom, 34,952,204, and in 1889, 37,808,892; East Indies, 202,000, 000; Australia, 3,000,000; South Sea Islands, 250,000; North America, 4,500,000; West Indies, 1,250,000; Gibraltar, Malta and British Guiana, 500,000. Guiana, 500,000. The present population of the entire British empire is 247,000,000. The work of taking the census among the majority of the people is ten-fold more difficult than in the United States, but notwithstanding that fact the English government secures the census of its population in one day 'Heat' Lightning a Misnomer. By the term 'heat lightning." so frequently and incorrectly used, people re-fer to the sheet-like flashes which they see off in the distance, usually near the horizon, and which are so far away that no thunder can be heard. Now, the fact of the matter is, what they really see is simply a reflection in the clouds or sky of the regular chain lightning attending local storm miles and miles away. often, on a sultry night, you will notice these flashes, or rather their reflections, in several diffrent directions. This is because there are different directions. This is because there are thunder storms in progress all about us. The distance from which the reflection of these flashes can be seen depends largely upon the condition of the atmosphere. When it is well saturated with moisture, these reflections, which appear as 'sheet lightning,' so called, are visible many miles, and if you are sufficiently near, you would hear the report and soon become convinced that there is no such soon become convinced that there is no such thing as 'heat lightning' unaccompanied by

To the Park Commission.

Atlanta, August 17.—Editor Constitution; robably the park commissioners have not no-iced the fact that a grove of pine trees in and ticed the fact that a grove of pine trees in and around the camels' pen are now being destroyed from the camels having gradually eaten all of the tender bark from the middle of these trees, to which they can obtain access, so that the rest of the grove is in danger of being destroyed by an insect known as a wood sawyer. This insect is generated by the destruction of the bark by the camels, and the disease and insects spread to healthy trees. It is a pity to lose such a fine grove, and as no one else seemed to notice this fact, I, as one of the admirers of our park take this occasion to send you this notice. Respectfully,

CARDINAL NEWMAN.

THE STORY OF THE LIFE OF A RE-MARKABLE MAN.

The Great Leader of the Tractarian Movement and the Different Phases of His Career—Who and What He Was.

The death last week of Cardinal Newman smoved from the religious world one of its removed from the rengious world one of its most prominent figures. No matter what our beliefs or our disbeliefs, we must all agree in our admiration of the brain power of the man and the earnestness of the preacher; and a sketch of his life will doubtless be read with interest.

Few men during the last three centuries have exercised on the religious opinions of their contemporaries so powerful an influence as John Henry Newman, writes The New York Herald. Considering the multitude of his followers, disciples and admirers, as well as the merit of the numerous works he has left behind, one has to go back to the days of St. Bernard or of Origen to find his like. Whether we sympathize with or deplore the religious movement that came to be known as Tractarianism, it is beyond doubt that it was the most important episode in the religious history of the nineteenth century. Dr. Newman was the master spirit of this movement.

Born in London February 21, 1801, the son of a Huguenot mother and a Lombard street banker, he was only a child when he lost his father and was placed, in 1808, at the high school of Ealing. He matriculated at Trinity father and was placed, in 1808, at the high school of Ealing. He matriculated at Trinity college, Oxford, in 1816; gained a competitive scholarship there in 1818, obtained his A. M. degree in 1820 and was elected a fellow of Oriel college in 1822. He was there thrown into the company of Richard Whately, afterward archbishop of Dublin, whom he assisted in preparing for the press the celebrated "Dialogues on Logic." Whately contributed not a little to aid the young man in disciplining his mind and acquiring systematic habits of thought and correctness of expression; but his liberalism in religion and politics was repellant to Newman's conservative nature, and llant to Newman's conservative nature, and led, in 1834, to a complete cessation of all in-

The apparent contradiction and inconsisten-cies with which Dr. Nowman has been re-proached are accounted for in his "History of My Religious Opinions," in which he lays open to the reader with a singular candor the open to the reader with a singular candor the various phases of his own intellectual and moral progress. He had been brought up to take great delight in reading the Bible, believed in the presence of angels living disguised in this world and frequently assuming the garb of good men; had contracted, he knew not how, the habit of crossing himself when he went into the dark, and had his mind disturbed by reading Paine, Hume and Voltaire. But in the autumn offisite—whence he dates his "conversion" to a positive belief—the perusal of a work of Romaine's made him a believer in his own election to eternal life. At the same time the works of Thomas Scott.

At the same time the works of Thomas Scott, the reading of Joseph Milner's "Church History" made him acquainted with the early to him the impression that the pope was lantiChrist. "My imagination," he says, "was year 1843. Hence that conflict of mind which of many have felt besides myself.

A writter of Promise.

In the interval between his election as fellow of Oriel and his ordination in 1824 Dr. Hawkins, vicar of St. Mary's, directed him in the study of scripture. From Rev. William James he learned the doctrine of apostolical succession, and from Butler's "Analogy" that of a visable church the eracle of truth and the pattern of sanctity. While his own original and powerful mind was elaborating and completing these various notions he was induced to contribute to the "Encyclopredia Metropolitana," and several periodicals, articles which at once stamped him as a writer of great promise. His first sermons at Oxford, in 1825, revealed in him a no less originality and power as a preacher. After having been for some time vice principal of St. Alban's hall under Dr. Whately, Newman was elected tutor of Oriel, and gave himself to the duties of his new position. He then formed the acquaintance of Hurrell Froude, elder brother of the historian, and the warm friendship which sprang up between them, as well as the extraordinary genius of Froude, gave to Newman's religious opinions and tendencies the impulse and direction which led him successively through all the exciting phases of the Tractarian movement and finally landed him in Catholicism.

A NEW ECCLESIASTICAL PARTY.

Hugh Rose had engaged Newman to write a history of the principal church councils as a component part of a proposed theological library, and to this study the latter had applied himself with characteristic ardor. The first part of this work subsequently appeared as "The Arians of the Fourth Century." But the picture of these early ages, contrasting with what the writer considered the actual decadence of the English church and the further ruin threatened by the liberal reforms, sadly disturbed his mind. In December, 1832, he and Hurrell Froude sought distraction from these thoughts and an opportunity of sadly disturbed his mind. In December, 1832, he and Hurrell Fronde, sought distraction from these thoughts and an opportunity of studying continental Christianity in a European tour. In Rome they met Dr. Wiseman, then rector of the English college, and while there began to write the collection of poems known as the "Lyra Apostolica," and published monthly in The British Magazine, just founded by Hugh Rose. Newman twice visited Sicily, to find relief from the manifold sadness which weighed upon him amid his increasing doubts and his carnest quest of truth. At Palermo he sickened and was at death's door. On recovering, he heard with dismay of the doings of the liberals in England. He had thought of a union with Rome, and through Rome with the rest of Christendom. But what he had seen of the state of religion in France and Italy had increased his perplexity and made him conceive that Providence called him and his friends to do a great work of restoration in England. The state of his mind is touchingly shadowed by his well-known verses in the "Lyra Apostolica," written during his return voyage on the Mediterranean, January 16, 1833: Lead Thou me on.

His influence at Oxford as a professor and breacher and his zeal draw to him agreet followed.

Lead Thou me on.

His influence at Oxford as a professor and preacher and his zeal drew to him a great following. He published a series of pamphlets to show that the distinctive doctrines and church forms known in continental Europe as "Catholic" belonged to the Church of England, which had maintained primitive Christianity.

As "Tracts of the Times," these won widespread fame. He also published a series of letters in The Record (newspaper) on "Church Reform" to stimulate English churchmen to revive this ancient "Catholicity."

HE DECLINES TO RETRACT.

therefore the cold and new establishments revive this ancient "Catholicity."

HE DECLINES TO RETRACT.

The battle between the old and new establishments waxed fiercer when in July, 1838, Dr. Newman became editor of The British Critic and began the publication of a series of articles defending "The Tracts of the Times," which had been attacked by the bishop of Oxford. In "Tract No. 90," published in January, 1841, he undertook to prove that the thirty-nine articles were consistent with Roman dogma. Censured by the heads of the houses at Oxford and disavowed by his bishop, he was called upon to retract. All he would consent to do was to withdraw on the condition that the bishops should abstain from centuring. He surrendered to Pusey the leadership and retired to his residence at Littlemore. When the joint action of England and Prussia creating an Anglican bishopric in Jerusalem was sanctioned by act of parliament in October, 1841, he broke the restraint he had resolved to put upon his pen to protest against the monstrous alliance of Anglicanism with heretics and Jews against Catholicism. After the act had been consummated, he published a solemn protest addressed to the bishop of Oxford and the archbishop of Canterbury. Had it not been for the advice of friends he would have resigned his position as a clergyman of the established church.

HE GOES OVER TO ROME. HE GOES OVER TO ROME.

In February, 1843, he made a formal retraction of all the charges which he had made against the Church of Rome, and on Septemtember 25th of that year he preached his last sermon on "The Parting of Friends," one of the most exquisitely beautiful productions in the whole range of pulpit eloquence.

He withdrew into lay communion, and as among those who shared his convictions and the public censure which they involved there were many who manifested a disposition to

WO'S AT LITTLEMORE.

The house Littlemore was enlarged in order to give hospitality to the wavering. Newman applied himself with redoubled arder to produce an "annotated translation of St. Athanasius," and all who joined him in his laborious solitude were assigned some literary task in conformity with their tastes. This study of Christian antiquity was quite in conformity with Dr. Newnan's conception of the English church as a branch of the primitive Apostolic church. A kindred study now suggested itself to him as calculated to, help powerfully toward his cherished object. He set his associates at Littlemore and his friends at Oxford and elsewhere to work on preparing a series of "Lives of the English Saints." The work was distributed among some thirty writers and the lives were to be issued The work was distributed among some thirty writers and the lives were to be issued in monthly numbers, under Dr. Newman's edin monthly numbers, under Dr. Newman's editorship.

The "Life of St. Stephen Harding" appeared in January, 1844, and caused almost as much uproar as "Tract No. 90." In February appeared the "Family of St. Richard," which occasioned increased excitement. It was represented to Dr. Newman, that such publications were inconsistent with the professions of a beneficed clergyman of the establishment, and he thereupon gave up his livings.

Newman withdrew from the editorship; but fourteen volumes altogether were issued on the responsibility of the individual writers.

Meanwhile some of the young men who had responsibility of the individual writers.

Meanwhile some of the young men who had sought a temporary relief from harassing religious doubt in the solitude of Littlemore and the pure atmosphere of its owner's private life had openly left to join the Church of Rome; and for this defection he was held responsible and assailed in no measured phrase. "So," he says, "at the end of 1844 I came to the resolution of widing an essay on 'Doctrinal Development's properties." says, "at the end of 1844 I came to the resolution of writing an essay on 'Doctrinal Development,' and then, if at the end of it, my convictions in favor of the Roman church were not weaker, of taking the necessary steps of admission into her fold." And again: "As far as I know myself, my one paramount reason for contemplating a change is my deep, unvarying conviction that our church is in schism, and that my salvation depends on my joining the Church of Rome. I have no visions whatever of hope, no schemes of action in any other sphere more suited to me. I have ions whatever of hope, no schemes of action in any other sphere more suited to me. I have no existing sympathies with Roman Catholics, I hardly ever, even abroad, was at one of their services; I know none of them, I do not like what I hear of them. And then, how much I am giving up in so many ways, and to me sacrifices irreparable, not only from my age, when people hate changing, but from my especial love of old associations. Nor am I conscious of any feeling, enthusiastic or heroic, of pleasure in the sacrifice. I have nothing to support me here." As the work on development went on his doubts vanished and his conviction became clearer. viction became clearer.

THE DECISIVE STEP. On October 8, 1845, Father Dominic, a Passionist, on his way to Belgium, stopped at Littlemore, and the next morning John Henry Newman was by him reconciled to the old Littlemore, and the next morning John Henry Newman was by him reconciled to the old church of his fathers.

He bade farewell to Oxford February 23, 1846, and after a brief space spent at Oscott college went to Rome to receive from Pius IX, then beginning his long pontificate, the mission of planting on English soil a branch of the oratory of St. Philip Neri. This had been the suggestion of Dr. Wiseman. In 1843 he came back to England a priest and an Oratorian. The two flourishing establishments in London and Birmingham soon arose beneath his care, choice spirits from among his former disciples flocking to him and casting their lot with his.

He resigned his rectorship in the university in 1859 and withdrew to the oratory at Edgbaston, where the spacious convent, the fine church, the flourishing high school and the charitable institutions he and his brethren established gave him happiness.

CREATED CARDINAL.

Pope Leo XIII bestowed well merited homors on Dr. Newman. In the consistory of May 12, 1879, he preconized Dr. Newman as cardinal deacon of the church. His elevation was an event which had long been expected. It was a deserved tribute to rare personal merit and superior literary attainments. On the 13th he received the beretta, and on the 15th the hat was conferred and his title of St. George in Velabro, a church situated in the lower town of Rome, on the left bank of the Tiber, near the foot of the Palatine—the only church in Rome dedicated to the tutelary saint of England. It is a church with interesting historical memories in connection with Rienzi, for on the first Lent, 1347, the Last of the Tribunes affixed to its door his celebrated notice announcing the return of the good estate.

As prince of the church Cardinal Newman's life has passed quietly in his English home. He has occasionally retired to a tiny country house owned by the Oratorians at Rednal.

THE SEATS FELL,

And Three Hundred People Make a Scrambling Mass.

What might have been a very serious catastrophe happened last night at the gospel tent, which has been for some time pitched at the corner of Larkin and Walker streets.

A tier of seats gave way and three hundred people were thrown to the ground pell-mell in promiscuous mass of frightened humanity. Fortunately nobody was hurt seriously, though several are known to have been bruised considerably and all were pretty well shaken

Mrs. Humphries was one of the ladies hurt. She was somewhat bruised, but not seriously injured. The seats in the tent are arranged on the circus plan. At the outer tier they are about ten feet from the ground, and considering this height and their closely crowded condition, it was a wonder that the accident did not result in serious injury to many, if not loss of life.

Just what made the seats fall nobody knows. The supports were all thought to be firm and

The supports were all thought to be firm and stout enough to hold up the seats when crowded with people, and, in fact, they have done this many times.

At one end of the tier of seats which fell was a pile of telegraph poles. People were sitting on these when the seats fell, and it is thought that they were the cause of the accisitting on these when the seats fell, and it is thought that they were the cause of the accident, being laid in such a position that they touched the main supports of the seats.

A regular panic followed the accident, and for a few minutes three hundred men, women and children, all in a frantically scrambling mass, made a lively scene.

THE STATE ALLIANCE CONVENTION.

From the general interest all over the state in the approaching meeting of the state alliance, it is safe to say that it will be the largest convention of farmers ever before witnessed in Georgia.

The railroads have all offered reduced rates, and the hatelot of the all offered reduced rates, and the hotels of the city are making special arrangements to accommodate the alliancemen who will come here.

The hearing of reports, election of officers, organizing new work, etc., will be the chief transactions to be made.

A scheme is now up for building a cotton bagging factory under the auspices of the state

From Tallulah come reports of great/gaiety. Very many prominent Georgians are at this favorite resort, and from all accounts each and every one of them is enjoying the summer. At the Cliff house there have been many pleasant entertainments. A friend who is there sends me a programme of one of these literary-musical even-ings which occurred last week. It will serve to show how the evenings are spent by some of the guests. The participants, as will be seen, are all well known to Georgia society. The programme

Miss Ridley, LaGrange, song.
Miss Pou, Madison, song—"Kate's Letter."
Miss Noble, Athens, Italian waltz song.
Mr. Hexel, Savannah, flute solo.
Mr. Bearden, cornet solo.
The recitations were by Miss Blalock, of La-Grange, Mr. Flexel, of Savannah; Miss May Burnett, Athens; Mr. Cohen, Augusta, and others. It was altogether a very charming entertainment as was attested by the vociferous encores.
The same friend writes of beautiful women now at Tallulah:
Mrs. Sandford Gardner, of Augusta, is one of the loveliest and most attractive ladies visiting Tallulah. Mrs. Gardner is chaperoning Miss Stokes, a bright and popular young lady from the Sand Hills, Augusta.
Mrs. Sohn J. Hill, of Washington, Ga., is without doubt the most fascinating, and a universal Mrs. Sohn J. She is tall, stately, very intelligent and with enough dignity to render her very attractive.

at the Cliff house, has, by her charm of manners and handsome appearance, won for herself many friends.

Mr. Cohen, of Augusta, with her charming family, consisting of Miss Nina Cohen, Mr. John J. Cohen, Jr., and Master DeVega Cohen, are at the Cliff house. Miss Cohen has just returned from college at Baltimore, and is quite a beele.

Miss Julia Ridley, of LaGrange, is at the Cliff house. Miss Ridley is a lovely brunette who sings delightfully, and is admired by all who are so fortunate as to claim her acquaintance.

Miss Pou, chaperoned by Colonel and Mrs. Joel A. Billups, has been at the Cliff house some time. Miss Pou is the recognized belle of Madison, and her presence adds much to the pleasure of her numerous friends at Tallulah. A more agreeable couple than Colonel and Mrs. Billups cannot be imagined. Mrs. Billups and her husband render themselves very popular among the young people, enjoying and engaging with them in the many pleasures afforded by this the most charming resort in Georgia.

Miss Effie Pope, of Washington, Ga., is a beantiful young lady whose many charms render her very popular wherever she goes. Miss Pope is at the Cliff house.

Among others who are there, mention is made of Miss Richmond, of Savannah, with her mother. The Misses Towers and Miss Milling, of Anderson, S. C., with Mr. Towers, of United States army. A MYSTERIOUS NOISE,

Which Startles a Belated Citizen Early Yesterday Morning.

About 3 o'clock this morning a belated pe-destrian turning the corner of Whitehall and Alabama streets, around the Capital City bank, was startled by a strange noise which seemed to be issuing from the bowels of the

He halted to investigate, but for some time was unable to locate the whereabouts of the disturbing noise, which was apparently made by a human voice. The sound was quite loud, esembling the heavy groaning of a man in agony.

The citizen looked up the street, then down, and up at the building again. Finally a struggle louder than the other drew the now thoroughly excited citizen's attention across the street to Rosenfeld's corner.

Then the sound came in a volume through the grating on the sidewalk, and the citizen was convinced that a dark tragedy was perpetrating in the basement below.

He ran off down Alabama street, and returned directly with a policeman. The two then rattled loudly the heavy door leading into the barber shop which occupied the basement, and from which the choking sound still issued forth.

No response was received to their vigorous rattling, and the heavy door resisted their united efforts to force it open. Still the mysterious noise continued, and the officer was about to hurry off for reinforcements when a sleepy voice inside exclaimed:

At the same time footsteps were heard shuffling toward the door, mingling with the smothered gasping that still continued as oudly as ever.

It looked very much as though the belated edestrian was to act a part in the discovery of a horrible tragedy.

After a few seconds more, during which the oliceman continued his rattling with vigor and the voice on the inside continued to inquire "Who dar?" and what he wanted, the loor was partly opened and a woolly head stuck out, making a dark spot on the electric light.

"Who's hurt?" asked the officer.
"Hurt?" drowsily replied the owner of the woolly head. "Nobody hurt. Dat over dar? -dat's on'y Tom. Dat's de way he sleepsnorin'.' "Does he do it on purpose?" "Guess not, boss."

"Don't mean it you reckon?"

"No sah." "Any malice aforethought?"

"Dat's ony jes' ez|customary at 'tud boss."
"Well, if that's the case, I'll let him off this ime," said the diligent officer of the law.

"It aint quite disorderly conduct, under the circumstances, but it's mighty close to it-narrow escape. At this juncture the citizen stole away into the seclusion of a convenient stairway.

Last Friday night about 12 o'clock Patrolman Henry Abbott caught Didschuneit coming out of the Kimball house alley with a sack full et goods on his shoulder.

He was brought to the station house, where the contents of the sack were investigated. The sack was a lace-fringed pillow case, and in it were a lot of canned goods, liquors, meat and other stuff.

Didschuneit was locked up and Saturday his house on East Hunter street was searched. There a large quantity of stolen goods, taken from the Kimball house supply room, as the officer believed, was found.

Everything, from potted meats to fine wines, was included, enough to stock a small store.

The keeper of the Kimball house storeroom identified the goods, and Judge Mannig sent Didschuneit to jail in default of a two hundred dollar bond.

The Trouble With Some of the Young Colored People of the Present Generation.

From The Charleston News and Courier.

A good housekeeper on Sullivan's island advertised yesterday morning in The News and Courier for a servant. There were, of course, many applicants. One of the first to apply for the place was a rather intelligent looking colored girl. She was asked if her former employer would furnish her with a recommendation. "Why, certainly, Mrs. with a recommendation. "Why, certainly, Mrs. Dr. Blank will be glad to give it to me," was the

A Grand Army Duty.

From The Philadelphia Times. The pension appropriations for our soldiers will reach the startling amount of from $150,000,000 to $180,000,000 next year, fully three times and possibly four times the entire revenues of the government when Abraham Lincoln became president and nearly or quite double the entire cost of Germany's immense standing army. These facts must be soberly considered if the Grand Army of the Republic would command the continued re-spect of the republic.

A Well Deserved Compliment .- The congregation at Asbury church showed their appreciation of their pastor yesterday by granting him leave of absence and furnished money to pay his expenses while away. This little church is rapidly coming to the front under the faithful work of Rev. W. T. Smith, their pastor.

O'REILLY'S ESCAPE.

HIS DEPARTURE FROM AUSTRALIA

How He Was Helped by Father McCabe One of the Sensational Episodes of the Dead Poet's Career.

The narrative of John Boyle O'Reilly's escape from Australia is worth recalling. The following is a condensation of the dead poet's

"The man to whom I owed my liberty was a Catholic priest, the Rev. Patrick McCabe, whose parish extended over hundreds of miles of bush, and whose only parishioners were convicts and ticket-of-leave men. He was a scholar and gentleman of rare accomplish-ments, almost always in the saddle, riding slone from camp to camp, and sleeping in his blanket under the trees at night.

"One day this remarkable man rode to my nut, and we walked together to the bush. I had made all my plans for escape, and I freely old him my intention.

"It's an excellent way to commit suicide,' he said, and he would not speak of it any more. As he was leaving me, however, he leaned from the saddle and said: 'Don't think of that again. Let me think out a plan for you. You'll hear from me before long.'
"He went away, and I waited weeks and months and never heard a word. I was not compelled to work with the criminal gang on the reads, but had charge of their stores, and carried the warder's weekly report to the Bunbury depot.

"Finally, one day on my way with this report, I came to a plain known as the race course. As I crossed it I heard a coo-ee, or bush cry, and saw a man coming to me. He was a big, handsome fellow, with an ax on his shoulder.

A FRIEND OF FATHER MAC'S.

A FRIEND OF FATHER MAC'S.

"He came to me with a friendly smile. 'My name is Maguire; I am a friend of a Father Mac's, and he's been speaking about you.' Seeing my hesitation, he-drew a card from his wallet, on which Father McCabe had written a few words to me. Then I trusted him."

This was in December, 1808. Some American whalers were expected to touch at Bunbury in February for water. After two months of suspense, news came to O'Reilly of the arrival of the barks. Maguire announced that he had arranged with the captain of one of the whalers, the Vigilant, of New Bedford, to ruise for two or three days just eutside of Australian waters, and take the fugitive on board from a small beat.

On the night of February 18 O'Reilly waited antil the warder had visited his hut, put on a pair of freeman's shees, as the trackers could easily discern the marks of a regulation convict's boot, and struck into the bush.

"About 11 o'clock I came to the old convict station and lay down behind an old gum tree at the roadside. In half an hour or so two men rode up, but they passed on. They were farmers, probably, or maybe a patrol of mounted police. Shortly after I heard horses coming at a sharp trot. They halted near me and I heard Patrick's Day,' whistled clear and low. In an instant I was with them—Maguire another friend, M——. They led a spare horse. I mounted at once, and without a word we struck into the bush at a gallop. For hours we rode on in silence.

"We reached the shore, found a small boat ready for us, and pulled about forty miles along the coast to the point where we expected to meet the New Bedford whaler. No one had thought to bring food or water, and for twenty-four hours or more the sufferings of the party were intense.

"At 1 o'clock on the third day we made out the Vigilant, under full sail, steering north. She was steering strait toward us, so we stopped pulling and waited for her. But we were bound to be wofully disappointed. THE VIGILANT PASSED ON.

"When she was within two miles of our boat she fell off several points, as if to avoid us. Every one stared in amazement. Maguire kept saying that Captain Baker had given his word as a man, and he could believe that he would break it. One of the men stood up in the boat and gave a loud hall that must have been heard on board. No answer. Again he hailed, and we all joined in the shout. No answer. It only seemed that the Vigilant turned a point further from us. At last she came abreast of our boat. She was then about three miles distant. Marging heisted a white shirt miles distant. Maguire hoisted a white shirt on the end of an oar, and we shouted again. But the Vigilant passed on and left our boat to 'ts fate.'

They landed on the beach and O'Reilly's

They landed on the beach and O'Reilly's friends went back to Bunbury, promising to return in a week and leaving him hiding in a secluded sand valley close to the shore.

He climbed a tree and caught an opossum, and also captured a few kangaroo rats. These animals supplied him with food. After three days O'Reilly, still believing that Captain Baker must be cruising for him somewhere off the coast, resolved to make another attempt to ker must be cruising for him somewhere off the coast, resolved to make another attempt to beard the whaler.

The row-boat was too heavy for him to pull alone. Six or seven miles further up the beach, he found an old dory, half buried in the sand. He dug the dory out, launched it, made it water-tight by plugging the cracks with paper bark, and put to sea alone.

"Befora night I had passed the headland, and was on the Indian ocean. I knew there was a current going northward. Next morning I gave up pulling and sat down to watch and wait. It was very hot. The sun flamed above, and the reflection from the water was scorching. That day toward noon I saw a sail. It was the Vigilant—there was no other vessel there. She drew near to me, so near that I heard voices on deck. I saw the men aloft on the lookout, but they did not see me—at least Captain Baker says so. She sailed away again and was out of sight before night. The dew and the cool air refreshed me, and I resolved to pull back to shore and wait for Maguire's return. I pulled all night, off and on, and in the morning saw the sand hills at the headland of Geograph Bay."

The REFUGEE'S COMRADES.

THE REFUGEE'S COMRADES. THE REFUGEE'S COMRADES.

After that second bitter disappointment O'Reilly left his sand valley no more. He slept most of the time for five days, and then Maguire came back with the good news that Father McCabe had arranged for O'Reilly's passage on another New Bedford whaler, the Gazelle, Captain Gifford. But Maguire also brought an unwelcome traveling companion in the person of a criminal convict, one Martin Bowman, a ticket-of-leave man, and one of the worst characters in the colony. He had disworst characters in the colony. He had dis-covered my escape, and threatened to put the police on the track unless he was taken off too.

That night we slept little, some one always keeping an eye on Bowman. We were up at daybreak and soon after we were afloat. We pulled straight out toward the headland, as Captain Gifford had instructed. By noon we saw the two whale ships coming along with a fine breeze. Toward evening we heard a hail and somebody shouted my name and cried out. 'Come on board! We were all overjoyed. We pulled alongside and I was helped out of the boat by the strong arms of Henry Hathaway, the third mate. Captain Gifford made me welcome and gave me a place in the cabin. Martin Bowman, the escaped criminal, was sent forward among the crew.

"Six months afterward, when the Gazelle touched at Roderique, an English island in the Indian ocean, the governor came aboard searching for an 'escaped convict from Australia, a black haired man.' I was standing with Mr. Hussey, the mate, when the governor made the demand. Mr. Hussey said that no such person was on board. The governor answered that he had information that a man had escaped on the Gazelle.

AN INGENIOUS STRATAGEM.

AN INGENIOUS STRATAGEM.

"Mr. Hussey feared that they might seize the ship, so he said that a man of that description, who had come on board off the coast of Australia, might be the person. He called a man named Bowman, whom every man on board detested, and he was put in irons and taken ashore. We knew that he would tell the whole story (the wonder is that he did not do it then; but he wished to make terms for his own release.)

"That night the officers of the Gazelle threw overboard the grindstone, with my lat, while I lay hid in the captain's cabin. A cry of 'Man overboard!' was raised, a boat was lowered, and the hat picked up. There were on board some English ex-convits who had shipped in Australia, and these only waited for a chance to get me re-taken. AN INGENIOUS STRATAGEM.

"But one of them, utterly deceived by the officer's strategy, declared that he saw me sink where my hat was picked up. When the governor came on board next day to demand his prisoner the flag was at half-mast, and the officers sorrowfully told him that the man he probably wanted had jumped overboard in the night and was drowned. ORMEWOOD PARK is that beautiful tract of 100 acres just east of Grant Park and north of the Confederate Veterans' Home property. It is within one-fourth mile of Grant Park, Little Switzerland and the dummy line as it goes around the park. The dummy line to the home runs for a half mile through Ornewood, thus making every lot in the park very accessible. A large force of hands under the direction of Major Charles Boeckh is now at work grading out avenues and drives. A beautiful avenue 60 feet wide, leading direct from Grant Park and the Boulevard, has already been graded through Ornewood, thus affording one of the most attractive drives around the city. Drive out there this evening and see for yourself. Mr. Harry Woodward has just completed a handsome $4,600 residence at the head of Ormewood avenue, and several more of equal value will be erected shortly by some of our best citizens. The entire 100 acres has been subdivided in the most advantageous manner, and the lots are from one-half to three acres each. No smaller lots will be sold. To those who will erect desirable residences we will self these lots on most liberal terms, it being the object of the owners to build up this beautiful park with first-class houses rather than sell to speculators. There is no location about the city that is as free from every objectionable feature as this property, and if you seek a suburban home you can do no better than select a lot here. Our prices are from 100 to 200 per cent below that asked for property equally as destrable in any other section.

Fame.

Fame and good reputation consists in doing the right thing in the right way at the right time. Generals are famous who led the way to victory. Orators are famous who touched the heart of the people. Smith's Tonic Syrup is famous because it has ever accomplished correct results. Used in the right way at the right time it invariably does the right thing. It never makes a failure. It never brings disappointment. It was invented by the eminent Dr. John Bull, of Louisville, Ky., as a substitute for quinine. It does its work even better than was expected. It has all the good qualities of quinine and none of its evil tendencies. It cures chills and fever, colds, influenza, la grippe, etc., even when quinine fails. It is pleasant to take, and children like it. It builds up a broken down constitution and fortifies it up a broken down constitution and fortifies it against the insidious attacks of malarial influ-

DEMANDS

That only honest and reliable medicfhes should be placed upon the market. It cannot, therefore, be stated too emphatically, nor repeated too often, that all who are in need of a genuine Blood-purifier should be sure and ask for

Ayer's

Sarsaparilla. Your life, or that of some one near and dear to you, may depend on the use of this well-approved remedy in preference to any other preparation of similar name. It is compounded of Honduras sarsaparilla (the variety most rich in curative properties), stillingia, mandrake, vellow saparma (the variety most rien in curative properties), stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, and the iodides. The process of manufacture is original, skilful, scrupulously clean, and such as to secure the very best medicinal qualities of each ingredient. This medicine is not boiled nor heated, and is, therefore, not a decoction; but it is a company of the street extract and the second control of pound extract, obtained by a method ex-clusively our own, of the best and most powerful alteratives, tonics, and diureties known to pharmacy. For the last forty wears, Ayer's has been the standard blood-purifier of the world—no other approaching it in popular confidence or universal demand. Its formula is approved by the leading physicians and druggists. Being pure and highly conand druggists. Being pure and nighty con-centrated, it is the most economical of any possible blood medicine. Every purchaser of Sarsaparilla should insist upon having this preparation and see that each bottle bears the well-known name of

J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

In every quarter of the globe Ayer's Sar. saparilla is proved to be the best remedy for all diseases of the blood. Lowell druggists unite in testifying to the superior excellence of this medicine and to its great popularity
